A SYNOPSIS RESUME.

Bath, March 10, 1913.

Editor Express:—

Sir,—One thing should be well-known, and that is, that on account of it having been the policy of the present Government to largely aid rural continuation schools, the Bath school became alarmingly, albeit negatively, discriminated against, because it was classed as an urban school. A prominent member of the Bath board asserted to me that it was wonderful how much more largely the Legislature aided the Odessa school than Bath. Thus, and also because of the heavy debt incurred through building the schoolhouse, the burden became great, and the situation called loudly for aid; Bath was struggling bravely, but did not wish to be understood as asking favors, only proper aid. The Minister of Education has been appealed to and he states that there are in the province many small urban schools like Bath, and that in a year or two the Legislature will come to their relief.

In the meantime, and previous to this, there offered the solution indicated in the petition; and to all appearance it seemed just the right solution, feasible and fair, and gave the promise of the proper increased efficiency needed. I do not believe, nor assert, (nor have I done so) that the Bath people at the outstart were aware of the various immense and even alarming inequalities and unfairnesses that have later, to close inspection, emerged and become evident. For instance, on the Board, the Bath council will appoint three members, and the outside district two, or some say one, (as the language of the act is not entirely decisive) and so this is somewhat hazy. Now, as the assessment of Bath corporation is $121,000, or one-sixth of the combined assessment of the whole district, or one-fifth of the assessment of the outside district; and as taxation without representation is something that no British people have ever tolerated, and as it is, generally speaking, a logical sequent or corollary that representation should be according to taxation, then, by rights, the outside district should have five times the representation which Bath would have upon the Board, or fifteen members, instead of one, or perhaps two. Again the three members which the County Council is to appoint, suppose they should come from Bath, that would make it worse than ever. But where would they be taken from, that is the question; and this is of course entirely hazy.

Again, the assessment of a neighbor of mine is $4100.00, and that of another $3500, and my own the same. Now in the purely urban part of Bath corporation, while the assessments of a few run up to $2000 or over, that of the majority runs from $100 to $1000, (say on an average $500). That is to say, that we in the outside district would pay a tax of seven dollars where one dollar would be paid by those in the purely urban part of Bath. Now is this fair? Should we be asked to submit to anything so unfair?

corporation, while the assessments of a few run up to $2000 or over, that of the majority runs from $100 to $1000, (say on an average $500. That is to say, that we in the outside district would pay a tax of seven dollars where one dollar would be paid by those in the purely urban part of Bath. Now is this fair? Should we be asked to submit to anything so unfair? If the tables were turned and the Bath people asked to submit to a like unfairness, would they rush joyfully and eagerly to swallow the morsel; or would they like it if they were accused of skimping parsimony, if they refused to do so? The true business principle (in financial matters) is equal justice and fair dealing to everyone. This principle, applied in special cases by the best good sense and mental perspicacity of the parties interested, is at the basis of all the industrial and commercial prosperity of the world.

It is not as if these unfairnesses were inseparable or not overcomable (as is the natural one of distance from the school house.) They can easily be overcome by proper methods. I never supposed, or dreamed of hinting, that any other power than the Legislature could change the statute. But I did think that as it is a common and recognized thing in the administration of any law, that discretionary power should be given to make it elastic enough, in any special local conditions to remove any deplorable friction that might emerge; so this statute might be elastic or stretchable enough, so that under our local conditions no unfairnesses might be allowed to remain. There are many other points that should be touched upon, but they would make this letter long.

As to the suggestion to hear the Inspector speak, he would probably just present a chain of argument for the cast-iron application of the statute, and it might even be impossible to open his eyes to the necessity of employing very great elasticity in the application of the statute under local conditions here.

Yours truly,
M. R. ROWSE.

WAGES FOR GIRLS.

Chicago Employers Try To Show That $8 Is Plenty.

CHICAGO, March 11.—William C.
Thorne, vice-president of Montgomery,
Ward & Co., a mail order house, told
the vice commission yesterday that
a girl "adrift" can live on $8 a week,
thus: Room rent $3, breakfast (coffee
and rolls) 40c., luncheons 90c., dinners
$1.40, carfare 50c., clothing and inci-dentals $1.70.

The witness gave the foregoing statement to show the commission's idea that there should be a minimum wage scale for women of $12 a week is too high. The figures given, he said, were the actual expenditures of one of his 1,973 female employees. Another girl employee disbursed her wages as follow: Room and board $3.50, laundry 20c., carfare 20c., clothing and incidentals $3.80, savings 25c.

The statement fails to account for a surplus of five cents, but this was not explained, and Senator Beall remarked that the girl probably spent
it frivolously.

LAST BOLT FIRED.

Premier Borden Reads Churchill Memo in Commons.

OTTAWA, March 11.—Awaiting a psychological moment last night, with the galleries crowded, and a full and expectant representation of Gov- ernment members on the floor, Premier Borden shot his last bolt. He intervened in the debate to read a long third memorandum from the Ad- miralty, bearing the signature of Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, in which the latter tried to discourage Canadians from building their own navy.

On Dec. 18, 1912, Mr. Borden wrote to Mr. Churchill, saying: "It has been suggested to me that the construction of large warships of the most modern type has been attended with great difficulties in its earlier stages and that the cost has been excessive."

Mr. Borden asked for details . On Jan. 23 Mr. Churchill replied giving a memorandum citing in detail the difficulties that he foresaw in Canada building battleships.

"The suggestion that the proposed battleships could be expeditiously built in Canada cannot be based on full knowledge of the question," he said. "The battleship of to-day has gradually been evolved from years of experiments and experience, she is a mass of intricate machines, and the armor, guns, gun mountings and machinery, all require separate and extensive plants of a very costly nature to cope with the constant changes in designs and composition."

"The cost of laying down the plant alone would at a rough estimate, be approximately £15,000,000. And it could not be ready for four years. Such an outlay could only be justified on the assumption that Canada is to keep up a continuous naval building program to turn out a succession of ships after the fashion of the largest shipyards in Great Britain and Europe.

On Jan. 24 Mr. Churchill wrote, in part, as follows:

"I think I may assume that the arguments used in the memorandum sent you on the 23rd instant will have convinced you that the idea of building the capital ships in Canada is impracticable, and I have, therefore, not attempted to obtain an estimate on that basis; it would, indeed, be almost impossible to frame one. But I am safe in saying that the increase in cost could not be prudently calculated at less than 25 per cent. or 30 per cent.

"Apart from the reply to your immediate question, it seems desirable to comment on another point. The Admiralty will, of course, loyally endeavor to facilitate the development of any practicable naval policy which may commend itself to Canada; but the prospects of their being able to co-operate to any great extent in manning the units is now much less than it would have been at the time of the Imperial Conference of 1909.

"It must be remembered that the new German navy law has necessitated a large increase in the number of ships which His Majesty's Government must keep in commission, and all our manning resources are now strained to their utmost limits, more especially as regards lieutenants, specialist officers (gunnery, torpedo and navigation), and the numerous skilled professional ratings, which cannot be improvised or obtained except by years of careful training."

LONDON, March 11.—An explosion, killing six men and injuring ten, and shaking the country for thirty miles around, causing widespread havoc, occurred yesterday at Nobel's Explosive Company's factory, Ardeer, Ayrshire. The dead are: A. McCubbin, Saltcoats; A. Holstein, Saltcoats; R. Orr, Saltcoats; John Scott, Saltcoats; George Watt, Kilwinning, and A. Brown, Stevenston.

The above information as to the victims of the explosion at Irvine, Ayrshire, was furnished in an Associated Cable despatch to-day.

"The town of Irvine, half a mile distant, felt the full force of the explosion.

The explosion occurred at Nobel's Explosive Works at Ardeer, over twenty miles from Glasgow.

The town of Irvine was shaken to its foundations. Many houses, churches, schools and public institu- tions were irretrievably damaged.

Ceiling fell everywhere, partitions collapsed, and scarcely a window was left intact.

People walking on the streets were thrown to the ground, and all the inhabitants rushed from their houses in consternation.

The harbor and many works adjacent to the scene of the explosion were masses of wreckage.

There were three distinct explosions followed by an immense column of smoke, which rose high into the air, and could be seen miles away.

CANADIAN GETS FORTUNE.

Ottawa Man Is Lucky Heir of St. Louis Eccentric.

ST. LOUIS, March 11.—The litigation over the estate of the late Jerry Moynihan, known as the "millionaire rag-picker," which involved more than six hundred claimants, was settled yesterday, when Probate Judge Holtcamp decided that the estate should go to Benjamin Foster Moynihan of Ottawa, Canada.

The judge held that it was established that Benjamin Foster Moynihan was a son of Jerry, and that the other claimants, asserting only collateral relationship, need not be considered.

Jerry Moynihan died in 1910 at an hotel, where he had lived twelve years. The public administrator found he had left an estate of $64,000. As soon as the value of the estate became known, claimants began to appear. Several women claimed to be his widow and many men claimed to be his sons.

COMING TO OTTAWA.

Dr. Friedmann Accepts Invitation of Hon. Adam Beck.

LONDON, Ont., March 11.—Hon. Adam Beck yesterday received a telegram from Dr. Friedmann, the German physician and discoverer of a possible cure for tuberculosis. The telegram was an acceptance of an invitation to address the Canadian Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, which meets in annual session in Ottawa on Wednesday. Mr. Beck is president of the association. Dr. Friedmann will probably attend the opening session.

Mr. Beck left last night for Toronto and will be in Ottawa on Wednesday to attend the meeting. He expressed himself as delighted at the prospect of meeting with Dr. Friedmann.

"So far as I am able to ascertain," said Mr. Beck, "the highest medical authorities and journals have a good deal of confidence in Dr. Friedmann."

The Sea Greyhound.

The waters about Iceland abound with fish. Of one of these inhabitants of the water, called the dogfish, a writer on the subject has this to say: "He is a long, cruel looking fellow and is the one fish the fishermen dread. He is the sea greyhound without legs, and no hyena is more crafty. His two eyes shine like light emeralds. In the centre of his back is a bony protuberance, sharp as a razor and shaped like a reaper's sickle, and his mouth, like his cousin's, the shark, is beneath his body."

MORE TEACHERS NOW.

Increase In Salaries Is Beneficial Says Provincial Report.

TORONTO, March 11.—The report of Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, for the year 1912, was tabled in the local House yesterday. It records an increase in salary schedules as well as an increasing supply of teachers for all classes of educational institutions.

During the year 1912 there was expended $9,006,394 on the public schools of Ontario; $897,890 on separate schools, and $1,948,058 on high schools, with $252,080 expended on continuation classes, making a total expenditure for education by the province last year of $11,944,422.

The total population of the province in 1911 was 2,523,358. The pupils in elementary and secondary schools numbered 502,255, an increase of 7,910. The total average cost was $20.61, or an increase of $4.79 per pupil.

One noteworthy fact is that in the rural schools the attendance is still on the decrease, while that in the urban schools is on the increase.

"It is gratifying to be able to report that the position of the elementary school teacher shows distinct improvement, both in respect to the grade of certificate held and the salary paid. In general it may be said the salary tends toward a satisfactory solution, and the supply of certificate teachers is approaching normal conditions. In 1912 the average salary paid in all the elementary schools to male teachers was $677, and to females $518, showing increases of $56 and $35 over the previous year."

Church of St. Sophia.

Some may have wondered who was the St. Sophia who gave her name to the great church at Constantinople, says The London Spectator. It is not named after a saint at all, its correct designation, Agia Sophia, meaning "house of divine wisdom." According to tradition an angel inspired this name. Shortly after the foundation of the church had been laid by Justinian a boy, set to watch the workmen's tools, was visited by a celestial figure with wings reaching to heaven. "Go and tell the emperor," commanded the angel, "that this church is to be named 'the House of Divine Wisdom,'" and on hearing the boy's story Justinian obeyed the angelic command.

When the required tint is produced, indicating the temperature, the steel is at once plunged into water.

Fire Fiends Failed to Destroy Chapleau Y.M.C.A.

NORTH BAY, March 11.—An attempt was made to destroy the Y.M.C.A. building at Chapleau by fire. A board had been pulled from the side wall in the basement and oil-soaked shavings ignited. Assistant Secretary Northcot happened to visit the basement at midnight, and discovered flames before much headway had been gained.

The building is a modern structure, and many railway men make it their home for rooms and meals, and many lives would have been jeopardized had the flames not been discovered in time. A week ago pool tables were mutilated by some enemy of the institution.

No Orphans In Australia.

There are no orphans in Australia. That is not because parents never die there, but because, when they do, the state at once steps in to the "rescue" of their little ones. Children who have been robbed by death of their natural protectors are practically adopted by the Government.

Unless some near relative manifests a desire to assume the responsibility and can demonstrate his ability to do so, the child is committed to the Children's Council, which selects some home among the farmers of the country. These foster homes are examined closely and often two or three are tried before one is found in which the child finds congenial surroundings.

After thirteen the state feels that its ward should earn more than board and lodgings. At that age, therefore, he is hired out, usually, however, to the foster parents who have been previously taking care of him. Three-fourths of his wages are deposited in savings banks; the remainder is his. When he becomes of age, or if he wishes money in order to learn a trade or to attend a more advanced school—or, in the case of a girl, when she wishes to marry—the savings are turned over to the ward.

FREEDOM VS. TRIBUTE

LIBERAL PARTY AT OTTAWA EN-GAGED IN HISTORIC BATTLE FOR RIGHTS OF PEOPLE.

Ottawa, March 8th, 1913. — Parliament is now in the throes of a trail of strength over Mr. Borden's naval propositions, which from the first has been the inevitable outcome of the debate. The position is now perfectly clear. The Government presents its Bill providing for a $35,000,000 contribution, backed by the speeches from the Prime Minister which make it beyond doubt that this first payment of contribution will be followed by others, making it a permanent policy of imperial naval tribute—putting back the hands of progress more than 40 years and introducing a totally new principle into Canada polity. The Government is determined to use every means in its power to force this measure through Parliament without any mandate from the people, and without intention of getting any such mandate.

The Opposition takes the ground that while equally willing to adopt any reasonable measure for the pur-

Deputy Speaker Blondin supported Hon. Mr. Rogers and after a sharp debate Sir Wilfrid Laurier, at 2 o'clock in the morning suggested that the House adjourn. Premier Borden shared with his followers the idea that the Opposition was in a quandary, and, elated with the idea that he could apply pressure to them, refused to adjourn.

TORIES PAINED AND SURPRISED

A sudden and painful awakening awaited the Government. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, unwearied by the lengthy session, in a brief speech syllogized the points at issue. Common sense, he declared, demanded that before voting so much money Parliament and the people should know what it was to be spent for and what the ships would cost; while Mr. Borden made it plain that this contribution must be periodically followed by others. The Opposition had voted in favour of spending the $35,000,000; but was there no better way of spending the money than in a contribution? Australia was increasing the effective naval forces of the Empire by building its own fleet. "We believe in the naval defence of the Empire as much as Hon. gentlemen opposite do, but we differ in the method to be employed—considering the question only from the point of view of broad patriotism we decided in favour of a Canadian fleet." Was

is what the Liberals are fighting for and intend to compel; when the time comes their war cry will again be the old British clarion call of "God defend the right."

WHY AN ELECTION IS NECESSARY.

The question is being asked why has the Opposition the right to demand an appeal to the people on this question of a permanent policy of naval tribute as presented by Premier Borden. It is because the Government, if its supporters had voted according to their pledges to their constituents before the election of 1911, would have had a majority of but 6 instead of 30, while had Hon. Mr. Monk been in the House their majority would have been only 5. That is, while they have a House majority, they have not a popular majority. This also in a Parliament which is 13 members short of the constitutional requirements according to last census. It is therefore evident that the Government has not a popular majority behind it on this question.

On February 27th, when the second reading of the Naval Bill was carried the Government had a majority of 30—114 to 84.

In Parliament there are twenty Nationalists—that is members who were elected to Parliament pledged to their constituents to oppose any kind of taxation for a navy.

These twenty Nationalists are Messrs Achim, Barrette, Bellemare, Boulay, Blondin, Coderre, Forget, Gauthier (Gaspé), Girard (who ran as a supporter of a Canadian navy, and suddenly at the end of the election turned against it), Gauvillault, Lavallee, Lesperance, Lamarche, Mondou, Monk, Sevigny, Nantel, Paquet, Pelletier and Rainville.

Twelve of these formed part of the Government's majority for the Navy Bill—Messrs. Blondin, Nantel, Paquet, Pelletier, Rainville, Coderre, Forget, Gauthier, Girard, Lavallee, Lesperance, Sevigny—voting directly contrary to the pledges under which they were elected.

Had they been true to their pledges and really represented their constituents they would have opposed the Naval Bill, and reduced the Government majority to six. Had Mr. Monk been in the House, he has since stated that he would also have opposed the Bill, which would have reduced the majority to five.

Therefore had the members of Parliament all been present and voted according to the dictates of their constituents the government's majority would have been but 5—and the opposition would have represented a large majority of the popular vote. And this in a House 13 members short of what the Constitution calls for according to the last census.

The Opposition position is that a government so situated has no right to attempt to force through Parliament a measure making so great a change in the constitutional procedure of the country without appealing to the people. Therefore in the interests of the people, a majority of whom they really represent on this question, they are in duty bound to use every means in their power to see that the voice of the people is heard. It is because of the very force of these arguments that the Government is so determined to force the measure through, and even to invoke the closure to shut off the voice of the people.

WHY MR. BORDEN FEARS RE-DISTRIBUTION.

At the elections of 1911, the vote for Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba showed a total of 124,571 Liberals, 104,710 Conservatives, and 6,824 Independents and Socialists—a total

The inference is too obvious further emphasis.

MR. MONK CONDEMNS COLLEAGUES.

Hon. F. D. Monk has issued a statement outlining his reasons for going from the Borden Cabinet and out of Parliament on occasions previous to the election of 1911 were so emphatic and that I could not acquiesce in a situation without such a course proved by the people at a public meeting, he is bound to them strictly.

That strict redemption of exactly what Hon. Messrs. Nantel and Coderre with Speaker Blondin and all ex of the Nationalists on the Conservative side in Parliament objected refused to implement their pledges. Small wonder pose an appeal to their electors.

GREEK FIRE.

Secret of a Great War-like of the Middle Ages.

The composition of the Greek fire used by the ancients has been the subject of much controversy and has been pretty generally set at what constituted it, yet the question as to its ingredients remained.

The name Greek fire was given to the inflammable and destructive positions that were used in the middle ages and especially the Byzantine Greeks at the Constantinople.

What distinguished Greek fire from the other fires used at this time was the presence of quicklime, well known to give rise to development of heat when brought into contact with water. The mixture was composed of such materials as sulphur and naphtha with and took fire spontaneously moistened—whence the name fire or sea fire.

From this mixture, which a thick smoke and a loud roar proceeded a fierce and flame. Instead of being extinguished it was nourished and quickened the element of water; and vinegar were the only remedies which could check the fury of this agent. It was poured from the parts of a besieged town in barrels or launched in red-hot stone and iron, or darted and javelins, twisted round and tow, which had deeply the inflammable oil. Some was deposited in fireships most commonly emitted through tubes of copper, which were on the prow of galley, and shaped into the mouths of monsters that seemed to stream of liquid and consumed.

The important secret of Greek fire was imparted in the latter part of the seventh century to the Byzantines, at Constantinople, by a man who deserted from the caliph to that of the Emperor. The skill of a chemist and was equivalent to the success of fleets and armies, and this or improvement of the military was fortunately reserved for a peaceful period when the Romans of the east were in contention with the warlike Islam and youthful vigor of the

The important art was

any mandate from the people, and without intention of getting any such mandate.

The Opposition takes the ground that while equally willing to adopt any reasonable measure for the purpose of "immediately increasing the effective naval forces of the Empire" they are willing to allow a measure, which practically amounts to altering the constitutional course of the Dominion, go through without the people being given an opportunity to express their opinion.

The points at issue are:—
Mr. Borden's proposal:—"That from and out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada there may be paid and applied a sum not exceeding $35,000,000 for the purpose of immediately increasing the effective naval forces of the Empire" with further provision in the Bill that this money should be spent on three dreadnoughts to be handed over to Great Britain for use in the Imperial navy.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's proposition:—"That from and out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada there may be paid and applied sum not exceeding $35,000,000 for the speedy organization of a Canadian Naval Service in co-operation with and in close relation to the Imperial navy."

The cleavage is absolute. On the one hand, the old Tory doctrine of Imperial subservience and colonial tribute; on the other side, the Liberal doctrine of Imperial unity with colonial autonomy; the establishment of a fleet which will fulfill the demands of the British Admiralty by guarding and patrolling the Canadian waters, in close relation with the Imperial navy, and ready at any time of danger to sail at the orders of the Canadian Government to the aid of the Imperial fleet.

This is the issue which Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his followers are determined that the people shall decide. This is the issue which the Tory party under Mr. Borden is determined the people shall have no voice in deciding. It is the issue upon which the Opposition has staked its future, and is now once more engaged in the centuries old struggle between the forces of Liberalism for the freedom of the people and the powers of Toryism for the muzzling of the people and establishment of autocratic Government.

With the well-organized fight now being waged in Parliament by the Liberal ranks, the issue must be eventually transferred to the polls, where it should be fought. When that time comes, whichever way the people decide, history will record that on this occasion the Liberal party fulfilled its traditional duty of ensuring to a free people a free voice in the shaping of the issues of their own country when any great constitutional change is contemplated. Whatever the results of the polls may be, Liberalism must win as it is certain to do in the long run with all free people under constitutional government.

HON. MR. ROGERS STARTED TROUBLE.

The call to arms in Parliament came with dramatic suddenness, significant methods by Hon. Robert Rogers—the co-worker with Sir Rodmond Roblin in the MacDonald by-election outrages. On Monday evening there had been a lengthy debate as to the approximate cost of warships built in Canada, occasioned by the absurd figures quoted by Premier Borden, which were time and again shown to be erroneous. Suddenly Hon. Mr. Rogers, who had been out of the Chamber a large part of the evening, attempted to apply the gag by complaining that the Liberals were out of order in this discussion, although Premier Borden and other Ministers had taken a leading part in the talk.

the Empire as much as Hon. gentlemen opposite do, but we differ in the method to be employed—considering the question only from the point of view of broad patriotism we decided in favour of a Canadian fleet." Was it not better that this money should be expended on the defence of Canada's shores with vessels that should be a first line of defence in case of any possible attack? This was a point that would be keenly felt in British Columbia, for instance, if the British-Japanese Treaty should ever be repealed and Canada's Pacific coast left undefended as it is now.

"These are some of the reasons," concluded Sir Wilfrid, "which compel us to do as in 1909, support the policy which will provide for fleet units of our own in Canada, which will give us a line of defence for our own shores and our own commerce and enable us to take our place in the conflict if an Imperial necessity should ever arise."

Therefore, it was that Sir Wilfrid moved the amendment that the $35,000,000 should be voted for "the speedy organization of a Canadian naval Service in co-operation with and in close relation to the Imperial navy."

MET PRESSURE WITH FORCE.

This came as a complete surprise to the Government forces. It opened wide the gates of debate upon the whole question of Canada's naval policy, its cost and ultimate results, and thus paved the way for the Opposition to take a definite and determined stand against Mr. Borden's attempt to rush his proposals through the House.

In a moment the fight was on. The demands of the Government to apply the gag were defeated, and from that time to the present moment there has been a steady day and night discussion of the matter from the Liberal benches while the Government side has to sit tight, simply keeping enough members around to see that a quorum is maintained and to avoid the possibility of a snap vote. So the fight will undoubtedly go on until the end of the week, when the House will automatically rise for Sunday. So the fight will continue, according to the plans of the Opposition, next week and thereafter until they force the Government to recognize the justice of their demands either by a Canadian Navy along the lines already approved by the Canadian people, and by the Conservative party itself in 1909, or else appeal to the people as to whether or not they approve of the resurrection of the ancient Roman policy of colonial tribute.

There is talk of the Government turning its attention to silencing the debate by introducing the closure. This would ill become the party which so prolonged the reciprocity debate in 1911. It would also be ineffective, because the Opposition would continue the fight over that measure just as determinedly.

Parliament has evidently reached an impasse. The defenders of the popular cause represent a majority of the popular vote at the last election. It is clearly a matter which should be decided by the people themselves. This

DISTRIBUTION.

At the elections of 1911, the vote for Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba showed a total of 121,571 Liberals, 104,710 Conservatives, and 6,824 Independents and Socialists—a total Conservative minority of 26,785. It is small wonder that Mr. Borden is afraid to venture on redistribution or go to the country with his proposition to ship $35,000,000 over to England to end a bogus emergency.

EMERGENCY FOUNDATION FALSE.

Parliament and the Dominion are still awaiting an explanation from Premier Borden regarding the information upon which he claims to have based his emergency talk, and its $35,000,000 remedy. On December 5th, 1912, Mr. Borden made his naval announcement in Parliament. He then produced the famous Memorandum from the British Admiralty from which to generate his emergency declaring "I now proceed to submit to the House the information we have received from His Majesty's Government. It is in the form of a memorandum" and after reading this Memorandum, the Premier continued "Upon the information which I have disclosed to the House the situation is in my opinion sufficiently grave to demand immediate action," which immediate action of course was the proposal for the $35,000,000 tribute.

The British Admiralty Memorandum was dated, Downing Street, October 15th, 1912, and it could not have reached Ottawa before November the 2nd or 3rd. It was on this Mr. Borden claims to have based his emergency demand.

On October 18th, Hon. F. D. Monk sent to Mr. Borden his letter of resignation in which he said—

"My Dear Premier:—I regret to find I cannot concur in the position arrived at by the Cabinet yesterday to place on behalf of Canada an emergency contribution of $35,000,000 at the disposal of the British Government for naval purposes, with the sanction of Parliament, but without giving the Canadian people an opportunity of expressing its approval of this important step before it is taken."

It is thus evident that the Government had decided to make an emergency contribution of $35,000,000 to Great Britain on the 17th October, or at least 15 days before the possible arrival of the information upon which Mr. Borden assured the Canadian Parliament and people that he had based his demand for immediate emergency action.

As to this, Hon. Chas. Murphy in Parliament made a very direct challenge to the Prime Minister, involving the Premier's personal credibility, when he pointed out that the resignation of Mr. Monk contained "Such an important contradiction of the statements made to this House by the Prime Minister on the 5th of December last, when introducing the naval proposal, that it makes the necessity for ministerial explanations absolutely imperative. Now Sir, what Hon. gentleman in the face of these facts will stand up in this House and seriously ask us to take the word of the Prime Minister upon this or any other subject? I submit that unless the Prime Minister is to be branded in a way in which the rules of the House will not permit me to characterize, he should defer the further consideration of this measure until his late colleague, the Minister of Public Works, (Mr. Monk) is in his place in this House to give us the opportunity of hearing from him the real reason of his resignation from the Cabinet."

This was pretty plain talk, but the facts as produced by Hon. Mr. Murphy were too strong and no effort has since been made by any member of the Government to answer his charges,

DEATH WARNINGS.

Soldiers Who Foresaw Their Fate on the Eve of Battle.

KNOW THEIR TIME HAD COME.

It Was Not Mere Fancy, but Grim Premonition, That Moved These Men to Read Their Own Death Warrants—A Case of Red Tape and a Bullet.

Premonitions get little attention, and those who have them little sympathy in these days. During the war, however, a premonition came to be looked upon as a most unwelcome guest. In the company I went out with there were two Garfield brothers. The younger, a quiet, modest fellow who spent his leisure time writing letters and reading, never joined in camp amusements, told a few of his more intimate friends while the regiment was in camp opposite Fredericksburg, Va., in 1862, that he would be wounded in the first battle he went into and die from the effects of it. The boys laughed at him and tried to cheer him up, but it was of no use, he never changed his mind. Aug. 28, 1862, was the first battle of the regiment. Young Garfield was as brave as the bravest at Gettysburg.

"This is my first and last fight, boys, and I shall do my duty," is what he said when the regiment plunged into that battle, in which the Iron Brigade of four regiments and two regiments of Doubleday's brigade, the Fifty-sixth Pennsylvania and the Seventy-sixth New York, met "Stonewall" Jackson's sixteen regiments and held them in check for four hours, our brigade alone losing 800 of its 2,500 men.

"I'm hit; goodbye, boys," said Garfield, as he fell out and went to the rear.

"Yours is a flesh wound in the calf of the leg and in a few days will be all right," said the surgeon to Garfield.

"Tell my parents I did not shirk my duty," pleaded the poor boy.

And he lay there without a word of complaint and died.

Near him was "Klicker" Finch of the same company with a shattered knee, a much worse wound than Garfield's. Finch demanded attention. He forced the nurses to keep his wound bathed in cold water, and if they were at all neglectful he swore at them. Finch lived to kick about poor hardtack and salt junk cut from dead horses, but Garfield is sleeping in the Bull Run cemetery.

Frank King was a rollicking young fellow in the same company, generous, brave and popular, a singer who always drew an audience. Like a hero he fought at Gettysburg, Second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg and Fitzhugh Crossing.

"Lime, this finishes my fighting," was what Frank Klug said to Lime White, a comrade, just as the Sixth Wisconsin swung into line for a charge the first day at Gettysburg.

"Killed in battle" is what the orderly entered after Frank's name that night. "Have all the fun with me you desire, gentlemen; it is your last chance," was what Major Phil Plummer of the

County Council

County Council Chambers, Napanee, March 12th, 1913.

Council met at 10.30 a.m., at the call of the Warden.

All the members present except Messrs. Platt and Irish.

M. Ryan, Esq., Warden, presiding. The minutes of the last day of the January session were read, and on motion were confirmed.

A deputation re Bath Continuation School was present, and Dr. H. S. Northmore introduced Mr. G. K. Mills, Inspector of Continuation Schools for the Province.

Mr. Mills spoke only on the general advantages of Continuation Schools, and stated that these schools are maintained partly at the expense of the Provincial Government, partly by the County, partly by the Township and partly from fees. A two-teacher school would cost about $1800.00 to $1850.00 per annum for maintenance. The Government grant would be about $510.00, and the County grant $510.00, fees $10.00 per year, and Bath to furnish the balance. In the case of an incorporated village like Bath, the school does not receive anything from the Township. It would cost Bath about 5 mills on the dollar for the maintenance of such a school. Children are passing the Entrance at 12 to 14 years of age and parents do not wish to send them away from home to some town or city at that age, as the pupil becomes enamored of the urban life and does not like to return to the farm. A child that furthers its education at a Continuation School does not get led away from the home surroundings. These Continuation Schools will, in the future, and are doing it now to a great extent, educate teachers for rural schools. The speaker stated that he was not there to endeavor to induce the County Council to establish a Continuation School at Bath, but merely to explain the situation and advantages to be received therefrom. In closing, Mr. Mills said that he would be pleased to answer any questions.

Moved by Messrs. Longmore and Hambly, that Mr. Mills be tendered a vote of thanks for the information re Continuation Schools. Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Osborne and Kenny, that a further discussion of the Bath Continuation School be deferred until to-morrow afternoon. Carried.

A communication from W. A. McLean, C.E., Provincial Engineer of Highways, re County Road expenditure, was referred to the County Treasurer and the County Road Superintendent.

A copy of an Order-in-Council, from W. A. McLean, C.E., returning to the County Council the sum of $5,757.81, being one-third of the amount expended on County Roads, was read.

On motion the communication was received and ordered to be published in the minutes.

On motion the Council adjourned until 1.30 p.m.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

A communication was received from Dr. H. A. Boyce, of the Kingston General Hospital, thanking the County Council for the grant of $750.00. Ordered filed.

The matter of an increased grant to the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, was referred back to the Finance Committee.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

How Mrs. Reed of Peoria, Ill., Escaped The Surgeon's Knife.

Peoria, Ill.—"I wish to let every one know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. For two years I suffered. The doctor said I had a tumor and the only remedy was the surgeon's knife. My mother bought me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am a well and healthy woman. For months I suffered from inflammation, and your Sanative Wash relieved me. I am glad to tell anyone what your medicines have done for me. You can use my testimonial in any way you wish, and I will be glad to answer letters."—Mrs. CHRISTINA REED, 105 Mound St., Peoria, Ill.

Mrs. Lynch Also Avoided Operation.

Jessup, Pa.—"After the birth of my fourth child, I had severe organic inflammation. I would have such terrible pains that it did not seem as though I could stand it. This kept up for three long months, until two doctors decided that an operation was needed.

"Then one of my friends recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after taking it for two months I was a well woman."—Mrs. JOSEPH A. LYNCH, Jessup, Pa.

Women who suffer from female ills should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, one of the most successful remedies the world has ever known, before submitting to a surgical operation.

Hambly, that the Town of Napanee be granted the use of the County crusher for a few days.

Moved in amendment by Mr. Cook seconded by Mr. Armstrong, that the matter be left in the hands of the Roads and Bridges Committee, with power to act. Carried.

"Killed in battle" is what the orderly
entered after Frank's name that night.
"Have all the fun with me you desire, gentlemen; it is your last chance,"
was what Major Phil Plummer of the Sixth Wisconsin said to a company of officers who were chaffing him about
being so very sober the day before.
Grant moved into the Wilderness in 1864. Forty-eight hours later they rolled his blanket about him and buried
him where he fell. Nothing could convince him that he would not be killed
in that battle, though he had escaped
in a dozen other great battles.

Captain Rollin P. Converse, who had won his way from the ranks and gone
through a score of great battles, went into the first day's fight of the Wilderness, May 5, 1864, confident that he would do his last fighting that day. He never fought more bravely. They left him on the field with a thigh cruelly
torn and death looking him squarely in the eye.

A Confederate surgeon told Converse
that his leg would have to come off.

"That would not save my life, so let it alone," was his quiet reply. But the surgeon began to arrange for an amputation.

"Let that leg alone," said Converse.
The surgeon paid no attention to the wounded captain until Converse had taken out his revolver and pointed it at
him. There was no amputation, and the next day they buried Converse with both legs.

Lieutenant John Timmons of Company C was entitled to muster out July 16, 1864, his three years having ended,
but red tape intervened and delayed
the order. Days and weeks passed without the word which would take him out of the service. On the night of Aug. 16, 1864, an order came for the regiment to march. A march then, in front of Petersburg, meant a battle.

"This is tough," said Timmons. "I ought to have been mustered out and gone home a month ago. In a day or two we shall have a fight, and I shall go to my long home—be killed."

The first of the Weldon railroad battles, Aug. 18, John Timmons was killed
—died of red tape and a bullet.—Chi-

"Why, I'm told he can be bribed."

"Why, you can buy him to support a measure, but he won't stay bought."—

A CITY OF DIVORCES.

Fez In Morocco Is Said to Possess
the Record In the World.

Morocco possesses a city, Fez by name, in which the great majority of women are divorced. The population of this city, according to recent figures, reaches about 150,000. The adult population is estimated at 48,000, 90
per cent. of whom are women who have been divorced from their husbands for no other reason than that those husbands could no longer afford to keep them. The supreme ease with which an Arab can divorce a wife renders the existence of such a city possible. The Moorish law knows only one indissoluble marriage—that performed by the reigning Sultan, who,
as the lineal descendant of Mohamet,
is also heredity High Priest.

Fez is a city of commercial adventurers and filibusters. Situated on the great caravansary routes from Algeria, Tripoli, and the Eastern Soudan, it is a convenient rendezvous for merchants returning to Morocco with small fortunes gathered by speculation in a minimum of time. Slave dealers—for they still thrive—are fully aware of this, and, alive to financial dealings, congregate at Fez from all parts of Northern Africa, making it a considerable centre for a large traffic in girls. The average price
for a female, according to her qualification of beauty form, ranges in the average from $50 to $250.

In order that the deal may bear the impress of a purely matrimonial bargain, a wedding ceremony takes place
in due form and the merchant generally young and ardent—finds himself
at the end of the legal three days
which must elapse between the contract of the marriage and the nuptials,
the possessor of a wife, or, indeed,
perhaps a dozen, according as his means will allow. Should his exchequer permit, he will install them in sumptuous quarters where, so long as his means hold out, he maintains a continuous state of festivity and pleasure, in which his spouses join. As soon as he finds his exchequer becoming depleted he gives to each of his wives in order of their preference, her conje, with perhaps a small sum of money. Should she have borne him
a child he is bound by the Koran's law to give her some furniture. When circumstances force him to part with his last wife, he bestows on her all
the goods and chattels that remain
to him and sets off again to Tripoli,
the Soudan, or Egypt, to return perhaps in six months and take another series of wives.

So it happens that Fez is a city of divorced women. It may be wondered what becomes of these creatures. The law forbids them, under penalties of servitude and degradation from taking another husband. Some of them may have saved sufficient from the spoils
to set up modest establishments of their own; others seek the protection
of an influential Kaid who is well disposed; many of them take to the rug making industry; most of them, however, become women of the type of the Greek Hetirae and are distinguished in public from their more serious
sister by wearing a large tiara, gilt
and studded. They have been described as among the most beautiful women of the world. The traditional method of wooing the good graces of a divorced woman is to present her with a sugar loaf, the Moor being extremely fond of sweetmeats. It is no unusual sight at eventide to see a Moorish gallant slinking along the walls of the city with an enormous
sugar-loaf under his burnous or robe.
Sometimes, however, the services of the slave are requisitioned to carry the sweet offering.

A few years ago her condition was not as good as could be hoped and with her husband and mother went to Calgary in hopes that the western climate would restore her health. For some time her health improved, but for over a year past she had been gradually fading away. Besides her husband she leaves her mother and a brother in British Columbia. She was attended throughout her long illness by her mother. Mr. Grieve has the sympathy of a large number of Napanee friends in his bereavement.

County Bee-Keepers Association.

At the recent bee meeting held in the Agricultural Office by Prof. Morley Pettit, a Lennox and Addington Branch of the Ontario Bee-Keepers Association was formed with the following officers and directors:

Pres.—R. B. Allen, Napanee.
Vice-Pres.—Henry Rooks, Napanee.
Sec-Treas.—G. B. Curran, Napanee.
Directors—Camden, Peter Teskey, Croydon; Willard Embury, Newburgh, Ernesttown, Fred Hamm, Bath, S. Fredericksburgh, J. Fitchett, Sillsville, Richmond, O. S. Davis, Napanee, N. Fredericksburgh, C. A. Schryver, Napanee, Sheffield, Lester Wells, Tamworth.

The total membership is fourteen, and the fee of $1.00 entitles all members to the Can. Bee Journal and all reports issued by the Association, including honey price forecast which is a summary of the honey crop. This is made from reports each fall and the price is set according to the amount of honey available for sale. This plan has increased the price of honey from 2 to 3 cents per lb. the last few years. An interesting line of Bee-keepers supplies, is on exhibit at the Agricultural Office, Napanee. These have been supplied free by the Ham & Nott Co., Brantford, and include Longstroth hives, foundation, smoker, honey knives, and other bee appliances. All Bee-keepers in the county who wish to join the Bee-keepers Association may do so by sending their membership fee to Morley Pettit, O.A.C., Guelph, or G. B. Curran, Agricultural Office.

Often the advocate of Lc is met with the argument, mouth of an opponent, "But excellent laws in Ontario the liquor traffic, much better this traffic under government vision, for we are bound to one form or another." An opponent happens to be the aforementioned law, quote some, which certain very fair. But, as the Pic out, most of these apparent laws are really "jokers" the presence of a word or phrase loop-hole by which any of escape. For instance the forbids the sale of liquor under twenty-one years of appear on the surface a sa youth, but looked into w the law states that there is only in case the person apparently or to the know person supplying under twenty-one." Well, of course may be a great difference as to whether a person look or twenty-one. Again the which provides a penalty for selling liquor after hours, the one which provides a selling liquor without a another clause which provides punishment for him who is of these cases. This law naturally, makes it very get information on these points so it is with the majority which are supposed to "re- liquor traffic."

Wordsworth Was Waited on Hand and Foot by His Family.

The somewhat doubtful pleasure of a visit to Wordsworth in his home at Rydal Mount, as described by Mrs. Kemble, is thus given by Mrs. L. D. Walford in "Memories of Victorian London."

"It was not a pleasure—the Wordsworths were such queer people and so wrapped up in themselves. Even though you were their guests you were expected in everything to play second fiddle to the man of the house. Round him everything revolved. You might have a poor breakfast, cold dishes, bad

THE GRANDEST OF INAUGURATIONS

Inauguration of Messiah's Kingdom Will Eclipse All Others.

It Will Be a Marriage Feast and an Inaugural Ceremony Combined—Jesus' Victory Through Death Constituted His Divine Election to Be King of Kings and Lord of Lords—Immediately He Betrothed a Bride.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Washington, D. C., March 9.—Pastor Russell arrived here this morning on his return from Panama, Kingston, Havana, Key West, Tampa and Pensacola. He took for his text Jesus' words, "When the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, then shall He sit upon the Throne of His glory." (Matthew 25:31.) He said:

When six thousand years ago man transgressed the Divine command and came under the sentence, "Dying, thou shalt die," he was cast out of Eden, that in the unprepared earth he might pay the death penalty. Even then, in the declaration that the Seed of the woman would eventually bruise the serpent's head, God implied an ultimate victory for humanity over Satan, sin and death.

Later, God's Covenant with Abraham told that victory would come through his posterity, but did not explain how. Centuries later, Abraham's favored posterity, Israel, came into Covenant relationship with God through Moses. Their hope was to keep God's Law so thoroughly as to merit everlasting life, and be competent to deliver humanity from sin and death. However, centuries of effort proved that none could keep the Divine Law satisfactorily.

The next Divine lesson was one of faith. Israel could not keep the Law satisfactorily—could not, therefore, have everlasting life, could not teach others to do what they could not do. The lesson of faith was that they should look forward to a coming Messiah—"a Prince and a Saviour." For centuries they waited for Him.

Various were their hopes respecting Messiah. The promises were scanned to note something concerning Him. Through the prophets God foretold that Messiah was to be the antitype of both David and Solomon, of Aaron and Melchizedek—very great. He was to reign from sea to sea. (Psalm 72:8.) Not only Israel would be blessed by Him, but all nations.

Israel looked forward with pride to the day when Messiah would exalt them very highly in the earth, and associate them with Himself in blessing all people. These good hopes have held them together as no other people have ever been held. They are still waiting, though disconcerted by the evidences that others are in some respect more favored than they.

Messiah and the Jubilee at Hand.

At last Israel's Star of Hope is rising! At last the prophecies tell that

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, March 10.—Wheat prices hardened today owing to a decline in British consols and because of weakness on the Vienna bourse. The Washington crop report, which proved to be less bearish than extremists had expected, came too late to affect the market. Closing quotations were firm at 1-4c to 3-8c net advance. The outcome in corn varied from a shade off to a like advance, and for oats was enhanced to 1-16c up. Provisions finished all the way from Saturday night's close to 10c down.

The Liverpool market closed 1/4d higher on wheat and 1/4d higher to 1/4d lower on corn. Antwerp wheat closed unchanged, Budapest 1/4c lower.

MONTREAL MARKET.

MONTREAL, March 10.—There was a fairly good enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba wheat, but, as the prices bid for parcels in nearby positions, showed no improvement, little new business was done, while the bids for future shipment were all under cost. There was no demand for oats, and the few bids received for No. 4 Manitoba barley were 1c per bushel below cost. The local market for all lines of coarse grains continues dull and prices are nominal. The local demand for flour is fair and a more active trade is passing in millfeed. Butter is firm, with a good local demand for small lots. Cheese quiet. Eggs fairly active. Demand for provisions good and prices tending higher.

him everything revolved. You might have a poor breakfast, cold dishes, bad
coffee—things were mostly bad at Ry-
dal that were only for the inferior general company—but the master's comfort was sedulously attended to—so different from my other poet friend,
Mr. Southey, with whom I also stayed at the lakes. Southey was everybody's body, attending to every one, looking after every one himself, while in the Wordsworth household it was the custom for the head of the house to break fast in bed, wife on one side, daughter
on the other, both wholly absorbed in ministering to his wants, while every other person might go hang!

"And it was the same all through the day. You might as a stranger long to see all you could of those beautiful lakes and mountains, and almost any

Voltaire's Poser.

Voltaire's test to ascertain the sense of responsibility of an individual was
to ask him to suppose that he had in front of him a button. The effect of pushing the button would be to obtain
one's dearest wish—love, fame, wealth,
power, or what not—and at the same
time to cause the death of an unknown
Chinaman? What would he do?

Causes Much Disease

Advice about Stomach Troubles
and how to relieve them.

Don't neglect indigestion, for it
may lead to all sorts of ills and complications. An eminent physician
once said that ninety-five per cent of all ills have their origin in a dis-ordered stomach.

Our experience with Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets leads us to believe
them to be one of the most dependable remedies known for indigestion and chronic dyspepsia. Their ingredients are soothing to the inflamed membranes of the stomach. Rich in Pepsin and Bismuth, two of the greatest digestive aids known to medicine, the relief they afford is very prompt. Used persistently and regularly for a short time, they tend to relieve pains caused by stomach
disorders.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets help
insure healthy appetite, aid digestion, and promote nutrition. As evidence of our faith in them, we ask you to try them at our risk. If they do not give entire satisfaction, we will return the money you paid us without question or formality. Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00.

You can buy Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets

Messiah and the Jubilee at Hand.
At last Israel's Star of Hope is rising! At last the prophecies tell that her morning of joy is about to dawn;
and that "the desire of all nations
shall come." Not merely are Jews claiming that Messiah's Day is nigh;
but Christian Bible students see the same. Mohammedans also see. Free Masons claim the same. All men are in expectation of something wonderful, just at the doors.

The multiplied blessings in the inventions of the last half-century bespeak the New Dispensation. If the preparations are so grand, what will be the inauguration and the Reign itself!

Inauguration Scene of Our Text.

Leading in the grand procession
picture is the Son of Man, following
whom are all the holy messengers;
but with Him upon His Throne will be His Bride class—a saintly few.
Thus it is written: "When Christ . .
shall appear, then shall ye also appear with Him in glory."—Colossians
3:4; Revelation 3:21.

Grand as have been the inaugural ceremonies of the past week, they were as nothing, contrasted with the glorious crowning Day for which earth has waited six thousand years.
Happy as were the faces which greeted the President, the picture was tame, compared with the joy of mankind when they realize what God has wrought!

Wherein Did the Jews Fail?

The Jews did not fail. All God's promises to them are still theirs. He never offered them spiritual favors,
or suggested taking them to Heaven.
The strongest promise, even to Abraham, was that all the land which could be seen would be given to him and his seed. Israel's blessings were to come through Messiah.

God foretold through prophets that Messiah would suffer. The Jews merely fulfilled a part of the Divine Program. Had Messiah gone to another nation, doubtless there would have been similar results. At the First Advent of Jesus God did more
for the Jews than He had promised.
He gave them opportunity of becoming members of Spiritual Israel. A few accepted.

Then Divine favor turned to the Gentiles, and gave them a similar opportunity. This work has required nearly nineteen centuries, and we believe is about completed. The Messiah class is about made up. Jesus
the Head long ago entered into His glory. Soon the last members of His body will pass beyond the veil.
Forthwith the work of blessing the nations will begin.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, March 10.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ended March 8 were 1350 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 2800 hogs and 600 calves. The offerings this morning were 1100 cattle, 500
sheep and lambs, 100 hogs and 300 calves.

Cattle were unchanged from last week,
prices being well maintained, owing to the improved quality of stock coming forward, which is costing more money in the country, and the fact that the demand for this class is steadily increasing.
Choice Easter grades were sold as high as $7.50 per 100 pounds by the load, while full loads of choice steers sold at $7 to $7.25, and picked lots at $7.25 to $7.50 per 100 pounds. There were also a number of loads of choice butchers' cows and some choice bulls offered, which met with a ready sale, and, on the whole, the market was fairly active. The supply was a little larger than a week ago, but, as the demand was good for packers and butchers, a good clearance was made,
and the prospects are encouraging for a good Easter trade.

Sheep and lambs continue strong, with prices 50¢ per 100 pounds higher, with prices from $6 for sheep to $8.50 for lambs. A few spring lambs were marketed at $10 per head. Calves were in good demand and choice milk-fed stock sold at $10 to $12 each, and some extra choice,
heavy calves brought as high as 70¢ per pound.

The tone of the market for hogs continues strong at an advance of 15¢ to 20¢
over last week, owing to the supply being lighter. Selected lots sold at $10.30 to $10.40 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7 to $7.50; do.,
medium, $5.50 to $6.50; do., common, $4.25 to $5; canners, $3.25 to $3.50; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6.25 to $6.50;
do., medium, $5.50 to $6; do., bulls, $4.50
to $6.25; milkers, choice each, $8 to $8.5;
do., common and medium, each, $7 to $7.5; springers, $60 to $65.

Sheep, ewes, $5.75 to $6; bucks and culls, $5.25 to $5.50. Lambs, $8.25 to $8.50.
Hogs, f.o.b., $10.30 to $10.40.
Calves, $5 to $12.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, March 10.—Cattle—Receipts, 27,000; market slow. Beefers, $7.15 to $9.15; Texas steers, $5.50 to $6.50; western steers, $5.60 to $7.90; stockers and feeders, $6.20 to $8.15; cows and heifers, $3.50 to $8; calves, $7 to $11.

Hogs—Receipts, 69,000; market opened
10¢ to 20¢ lower, closed steady. Light,
$8.55 to $8.95; mixed, $8.75 to $8.80; heavy,
$8.20 to $8.90; rough, $8.20 to $8.35; pigs,
$6.70 to $8; bulk of sales, $8.55 to $8.70.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 26,000;
market weak; native, $6 to $7; western,
$6.25 to $7; yearlings, $7.25 to $8.10;
lambs, native, $8 to $9; western, $5 to $9.05.

LIVERPOOL LIVE STOCK.

LIVERPOOL, March 10.—John Rogers & Co. cable that there is no change to report in the cattle trade today at Birkenhead, and Saturday's quotations were well maintained at 14¢ to 15½¢ per pound
for Irish steers.

Caribou Horns.

The caribou, or water buffalo, of the Philippines often attain to great length
of horn, one specimen, it is believed,
standing quite without a rival in that respect. Measured along the curve of the horns, it is over twelve feet from one tip to the other. The spread of this animal's horns is greater than the width of several of the narrow lanes of the town—Iloilo—where his owner lives,
and in consequence a brown line of
scarred bark on the thickset bamboo
hedges often marks the roads which
this splendid old giant has traversed.—

GIVE YOUR BOY A FARM!

Every farmer wants to provide for his sons, but seldom will the old homestead, developed with toil, suffice to meet their needs. The boys have been brought up to the land. They are familiar with all the phases of farming. They should have land of their own. How is the farmer going to meet this emergency?

The Logical Answer is Western Canada.

Thousands of acres, divided into 160 acre farms, are being thrown open for entry by the Dominion Government along or near the lines of the

CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY.

The land gives a wide chance. There are some plots on the open prairie and others again in the well-wooded, well-watered districts in

Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

A large number of these homesteads are particularly adapted to mixed farming.

Write or Enquire To-day.

Any agent of the Canadian Northern Railway, or the undersigned will be glad to send, on application full information as to the location of these homesteads and the way to secure and reach them. Write for "The Bread Basket," "35,000 Free Homestead" and our Peace River Booklet. You will be interested.

KING OF GAMBLERS

Francois Blanc, the Ex-Convict, Who Bought Monaco.

THEN STARTED MONTE CARLO.

A Bold and Reckless Soldier of Fortune, He Instituted the Gilded Gambling Palace That Now Wins Millions Yearly For Its Wealthy Owners.

Francois Blanc, an ex-convict from Homburg, bought the principality of Monaco, boots and baggage. The genius of gambling had claimed many an individual, many a noble and his estate and not infrequently an entire city, but it had never before undertaken such a conquest as this.

Francois Blanc is one of the most remarkable of all soldiers of fortune. Of his early history little is known. He was seized by the authorities of Homburg for having made fraudulent use of the telegraph in relation to stock exchange news received from Paris. His method was one of the very oldest—namely, the corruption of the employees. It seems that at this time the German law did not precisely cover this species of swindling, and he and his twin brother escaped with a sentence of seven months.

Francois Blanc was not discouraged. He had accumulated 100,000 francs, and with that sum he established the Kursaal at Homburg. The Kursaal flourished, and Blanc might have gone on there to the realization of his ambitions but for the national sentiment he was shrewd enough to foresee. Blanc realized that the time was not far distant when the German people would put down the sort of gambling in which he was engaged, so he began to look about for some new country in which to set up his temple of fortune. On the coast of the Mediterranean, between the kingdoms of France and Italy, there was a little independent principality. It was not more than two miles and a quarter long and hardly three-quarters of a mile wide, but it was an independent kingdom, with an old and royal house.

Charles III. was the reigning prince, but he was a tattered monarch, and his court was a beggarly make believe. In his desperate situation it is said he applied to a shrewd Parisian for counsel, who advised him to set up gaming tables and thereby "ruin other people's subjects since you have already ruined your own."

Charles III. followed that pregnant advice. He sold a gambling concession in the principality to two adventurers, Duval and Lefevre. These men built the casino, but their venture was not particularly successful. They asserted that Charles' avarice could not be satisfied, and when Francois Blanc arrived on the Mediterranean, around 1860, he bought the concession and moved his gambling establishment from the Kursaal at Homburg to Monaco.

Francois Blanc was a bold and daring adventurer. The little principality was divided practically into three towns—Monaco, Condamine and Monte Carlo. It was the last that Francois Blanc occupied. He employed the best

sale of Jersey Sees to it That Is Kept Absolutely Pure

Undoubtedly the little island of Jersey has been enriched by its cows. In modern days pig and fruit culture have been introduced, but it is the solid, continual production of cattle that has made the island famous.

So carefully do they tend to and so frugal are they of trodden pastures, says Our Islander, that they actually tend to animals, and the children's servants shift them at morning and night.

Gentleness is their cue in the calf, which, after a dose of the mother's milk, has to be content with milk, or skillegalee. She is and fed by hand and becomes gentle and when two yields indoors or out her bucketful of frothy, rich milk, quiet women folk who milk.

The Jersey breed is kept stringently against the import of foreign stock. The summer is very rich, and cattle come from May till October, but in winter they are always housed.

The milk is used almost exclusively in making butter. A good Jersey makes an average of a pound every day in the year. The beautiful in form, and her dairy products make her a great asset with the household, an ornament to any farm or estate and a great profit to her owner.

CURIOUS CUSTOMS IN

Dancing Girls Are Married Representing Gods.

Parrots are taught in India a large portion of their time in the names of gods, and a spokesman brings a great price for a parrot, especially among business men, who imagine that by owning such a bird they are accumulating their spiritual treasures while they attend to their occupations.

Many of the dancing girls belonging to the temples are wives of the gods. At an early age they are united in wedlock with the gods, and they are worshipped in the temple. Strange matrimonial connections formed in compliance with the wishes of the parents, who believe a highly meritorious act to be the marriage of their daughter in marriage to a senseless idol.

The only foreigner who ever lived inside of the great Temple of the gods was an English officer, who succeeded in gaining admission and dressing himself like a native.

When the Brahmins discovered that their holy place had been thus profaned, they became so enraged that the English residing at the temple were obliged to flee for their lives.

Suspecting their pursuers to be desirous of gratifying their revenge, they stole money by the way, and while the pursuers were stopped to pick it up, they succeeded in reaching safety.—Philadelphia Inquirer

J. MCKITTRICK, Tp. Clerk.

Francis Blanc was a bold and daring adventurer. The little principality was divided practically into three towns—Monaco, Condamine and Monte Carlo. It was the last that Francois Blanc occupied. He employed the best architect to be had, built a great casino, laid out beautiful gardens and terraces and expended over $3,000,000 upon the mere prospect of making Monte Carlo the gambling headquarters of Europe.

Francois Blanc, the ex-convict from Homburg, was no ordinary man. Lord Brougham said that Blanc was the greatest financier of his time. At any rate, his great financial adventure justified itself. Blanc came to live in splendor. He married his daughters to princes, he accumulated a fortune of 250,000,000 francs, and he left behind him an establishment that nets at least $5,000,000 a year in profits.

More than this, Francois Blanc bought and paid for the principality of Monaco. He paid Charles III. 500,000 francs a year and all his expenses, with a percentage of the profits; he kept up all the roads and gardens for the principality; he paid the police and magistrates and all fixed charges of the kingdom. Moreover, when the merchants of Nice endeavored to persuade the French senate to resist gambling at Monte Carlo and when the subjects of the principality threatened to revolt Blanc, daring and full of resources, had Charles issue an edict abolishing all taxes in the principality, and out of his concession, in addition to what he had already paid, Blanc paid all the taxes of Monaco.

When Albert Honore Charles, the present Prince of Monaco, came to the throne he remained under the thumb of the famille Blanc, and in 1898 the concession they had obtained was renewed for fifty years upon the payment of 10,000,000 francs down, 15,000,000 to be paid in 1914 and other vast sums, together with practically all fixed charges of the principality. All this is done by a company called La Societe des Bains de Mer de Monte Carlo.

And so the genius of gambling ate a king and his court, a monarch of one of the oldest reigning houses in Europe—a palace, an army, a principality with its subjects, and a bishop and cathedral to boot!—Melville Davison Post, in the Saturday Evening Post.

THE ONTARIO PARLIAMENT

No more striking proof of the popularity of the leader of the Opposition in Ontario could be given than the amazingly large crowds that filled every gallery and spot of vantage in the Legislature last week when Mr. Rowell made his speech on the Abolish the Bar policy. Visitors were present from all parts of the Province, and unfortunately some were unable to gain admittance at all. Half an hour before the House opened every gallery was crowded and many people had to stand. One of the significant incidents was Sir James Whitney's anxiety that there should be no applause. When Mr. Rowell rose to speak some University men in the gallery began to applaud. Sir James was on his feet in an instant and wanted it to be distinctly understood that no hand-clapping or demonstration of any kind would be tolerated from the visitors of the House. The last sentence was quite a tribute to Mr. Rowell wasn't it?

A POOR STATEMENT.

In spite of careful attempts to make light of the matter, the fact is gradually becoming known throughout the Province that in Ontario finances, as revealed in the Budget statement by Hon. I. B. Lucas, there was a deficit last year of $245,000 on revenue account, and that this year the deficit up to the present, not including the extra supplementary estimates, is $213,000. The total will be more than that of last year.

This is not pleasing news and reflects discredit on the Government which has to report it. What is worse, Mr. Lucas has outlined no plan for coping with the difficulty. The liabilities have to be met, but the acting Provincial Treasurer has refused in the House to discuss the matter or to tell whether the necessary funds will be raised by special taxes or by loans. Such disregard of the vital question of finance has no parallel in Provincial politics.

THE TEMPERANCE ISSUE.

"Reactionaries" is a perfectly fair definition of the Government on the temperance question. The Liberal policy of Abolish the Bar has been re-introduced into the House, but the Conservatives, who had an opportunity to take a forward step, moved backwards instead. In the recent temperance debate the Government's resolution did not go nearly as far as their proposal last year to abolish the treating system. That was their positive cure for the evils of the liquor traffic as opposed to Abolish the Bar. This season they simply stand on their past record, whatever that is, and the abolition of the treating clause is relegated to an obscure, minor and qualified position in their resolution.

Local Option and other temperance votes in the last few years have proved that Ontario is progressing, and that it is moving quickly—to wipe out every bar and every club license (and therewith the treating system).

The Whitney Government on this question and on others is not in line with the progressive sentiment of the Province. They may have the support of "Reactionaries" in their "policy of do nothing," but "reactionaries" are not going to be allowed by the people of Ontario to rule this Province.

BAGGAGE SMASHING.

An English View of American Methods and Our Big Trunks.

A fact to be sternly borne in mind,
especially by those who voyage round
the world, is that luggage which will serve for every other place on earth is too often useless on American railways. The wanton breakage of luggage goes on on every American railway. A trunk may travel round the world, on all the European railways,
and in the hold of every kind of boat;
it may be heaved in and out of sampans, dumped about by bullock carts
and knocked around by coolies and carriers, and arrive at, let us say, San Francisco, as sound and serviceable as when it left the London terminus, and before it has journeyed half across the American continent be smashed and useless. Many thousands of pounds' worth of European travelers' luggage is thus gratuitously destroyed every year.

The American press, and in some degree the public, treat the "baggage
smasher" as a joke, instead of being,
as he is, an almost criminal survival
of the barbarous days of America, one of the last points on which the United States fails of being a civilized country. To this abuse are due the monstrous, iron bound trunks which mark
the average American traveler, a nightmare to the porters of less reckless countries, and for the transportation of which the owners on continental railways not seldom pay more than they do for their own first class tickets.
Just as the struggle goes on between projectile and armor plate, so does the conflict between the American traveler
to build luggage which will beat the baggage smasher, and of the baggage
smasher by more and more strenuous
smashing to beat the traveler and trunk
builder.—London Times.

The superb courage with which he rescues from certain death a young woman whom he had never before seen, and the reckless daring with which he risks his reputation in an attempt to win this woman under an assumed name, will appeal strongly to every lover of romance and admirer of courage. How Richard prospered in his enterprise under difficulties which would discourage any but the most stout hearted we leave the reader to find out, and a most delightful pastime it will prove.*

CHAPTER I.

MR. JACOB RENWYCK, a multimillionaire New Yorker, had gone to Texas in order to straighten out several business complications. Besides his northern interests, he was connected with many new enterprises in the southwest, — mines in Arizona, cattle and cattle lands in the Lone Star State and projected railroads through the cotton belt. For a time his vast schemes had prospered until his ideas as to their conduct began to clash with those of old Bill Williams, the great Texan land speculator and cattle king, with whom Renwyck had for many years joined forces, the one controlling the east, the other the west. Correspondence had proved unsatisfactory; therefore the New Yorker determined to settle the business personally by a flying trip to San Antonio, Tex., where he intended to beard the lion in his den.

Miss Harriet Renwyck, the only daughter of the capitalist, had induced her father to take her with him on the trip. She was a beautiful and high spirited girl of twenty years, the idol of the old man's heart, and the one person on earth who could manage him even when his arrogant temper reached the outbreaking point. On their arrival at San Antonio they learned that Mr. Williams had departed the week before for his cattle ranch, which lay about 200 miles to the westward. He was not expected to return for some time, so Mr. Renwyck determined to follow him without delay.

The two travelers took a branch road which carried them to a point twenty to a simply furnished but clean, fresh room, the two magnates sat down to discuss their business differences. At the outset they locked horns, and midnight found them as far as ever from an amicable settlement.

"Good Lord, Renwyck," the Texan laughed, "it's after 12 o'clock, and we're losin' a sight of beauty sleep. Let's stop buckin' an' take a drink. That's somethin' no honest man can squabble over unless the whisky's bad, which this ain't. Here's how! Turn in, but don't thrash around your bunk all night. We can do our wrastlin' in the daytime."

But Mr. Renwyck did "thrash around his bunk" all night, and not once did he close his eyes. On several crucial points he was in the wrong, and no one knew it better than himself, yet with bulldog tenacity he clung to his false position. With loss of sleep his irritation increased, and morning found him eager for the fray and more insistent than ever in his unjust claims.

Breakfast over, the two went at it hammer and tongs, but without adjustment of the difficulties. The New Yorker's craft and legal knowledge were wrecked on the rocks of the Texan's common sense and humor, and at last Mr. Renwyck's temper burst all bounds. In one short angry speech he severed every business interest with his host and former partner and turned that gentleman into a calm but remorseless enemy.

The horses were ordered without delay, and, greatly to Miss Harriet's regret, for there was much that she wanted to see on the ranch, they left the place at once, in order that the angry Mr. Renwyck might get to the distant railroad by 2 o'clock and hurry back north as fast as steam and his hope of vengeance could carry him. However, they were not to reach that point without experiencing another phase of Texas life, with its infinite possibilities of excitement and surprise.

Their wagon had broken down, and the outfit, with the guide and the others, had been left behind at the ranch, with instructions to follow after so soon as things were put in shape. A guide was hardly a necessity, for the route to the railroad station lay straight south over the prairie. There was a range of hills to the right, and with that and a pocket compass even such a tenderfoot as Jacob Renwyck could scarcely lose the way.

The two cantered along in the pleasant morning. The enjoyment of the ride greatly mollified Mr. Renwyck's exacerbated temper, although it in no wise altered his determination to make found herself caught, as it were, on the edge of a maelstrom of panic stricken animals and swept irresistibly along with them.

CHAPTER II.

AWAY on the other side of the herd two cowboys had been lazily lying on the grass in the shade cast by the motionless bodies of their ponies. They had been keeping such indifferent watch that neither of them had seen Miss Renwyck. It was the noon hour. The morning shift had gone back to camp, and the afternoon gang had not yet arrived, so there were only these men watching the herd. The quiet had made them relax their usual vigilance. The instant they heard the first "bark" from the steers they leaped to their feet and sprang to saddle.

"They're off!" cried the taller of the two as he drove his spurs into his pony and took a straight cut across the prairie so as to head them off.

"We'll get 'em millin' under the hills all right!" shouted his companion as they raced along.

A quarter of a mile, however, brought them in sight of the woman. The first man, who was a little ahead, pointed.

"Look yonder!" he shouted.

"My God!" said the other. "Right in their direction. She's a goner if"—

"Faster!" cried his companion.

He saw that unless the onrush of the cattle were diverted the girl would be overwhelmed and trampled to death in the stampede. Try as he might, he could not reach her in time, yet he had the fastest pony on the range and rode like a centaur. He fairly lifted the broncho through the air in his mad impetuosity. A woman was a quickening sight on the range, and all the chivalry in the souls of the men responded to the appeal of her peril; but, try as they might, they realized they could do nothing.

"We'll be too late!" cried the leading man.

"Yep," answered his companion laconically, driving his spurs home again.

"No," cried the first man as the cattle swerved; "she's kept her head. That woman knows her business. They'll be milling in a minute."

"She'd ought to be gittin' out'n it now, though."

"Yes. God, they've got her!" he cried as he saw the girl caught on the periphery of the whirling mass.

"We'll git her out!" cried the other.

"If she lives long enough to give us a chance."

When stampeded cattle get to milling they turn in upon themselves, either involuntarily or because of pressure put upon them by cowboys seeking to control them. They sweep around in concentric circles in a great spiral. The pressure on the outside tends to constrict the circles more and more until the cattle are jammed into a whirling vertiginous mass, of which nothing can be seen but uplifted heads and upturned horns. This mass, frantic with fear and fury, sways and whirls over the ground like a tornado, with a motion of rotation and translation at the same time. Above the dust of its trampling comes the clicking of the dew claws and the cleft hoofs as the feet are lifted sharply from the ground. These, with the rattling of horns and the bellowing of those on the outer edge, make the animal whirlpool a perfect inferno of noise and to her, pleaded with her, impetuously stimulated her. She held on desperately as she swept around.

As they drew near the two recognized that this was her worst mills they had ever seen. There was a little dip to the right where the cattle had swerved thrown them even more toward the center than would curved on level prairie. The thought he had never seen a stampede tighten so quickly and with such force. His impulse was to leap across the intervening cattle at the figure of the girl, as a man rides down an obstacle knew that such a step would The mill must be broken. It unwound. The first man's pony in toward the outer edge raced with it, seeking an opening for the woman, to whom he cried of encouragement. With the quilt at his wrist he struck it ahead of him again and again, but his blows had no effect, but at last met with response. The cattle swerved slightly, and he forced his horse into the outer edge. He effected this entrance, he knew had made a sufficient beginning, able him in the end to loosen the ring. He was just a front of the girl, and back of other man was nobly second in the fight. Would she be able to long enough for them to achieve her rescue?

They worked desperately, ways work desperately under circumstances, but in this instance with added incentive. The nearest man to her, divine than saw as he caught glimpses of her face, deathly pale through that she could not keep up her effort. His effort was twofold—the mill and save the girl. So doubled energy he bored his way in. The outer edge where was well broken now, but two about 200 miles to the westward. He was not expected to return for some time, so Mr. Renwyck determined to follow him without delay.

The two travelers took a branch road which carried them to a point twenty miles distant from the ranch, and here they engaged horses, a camping outfit and a guide for the balance of the trip. Both were used to the saddle, and to Miss Renwyck this long free gallop across the plains was a new and exhilarating experience. It was spring-time, when the prairies are at their best, rolling away like some vast green sea as far as the eye can reach. The sun, which in another month would parch the grass to a dry and crackly stubble, now sent out a lazy, comfortable warmth which was further tempered by an intermittent breeze.

They passed great herds of browsing cattle that munched the grass or lifted their heads in bovine languor as the riders cantered on. Once they threaded their way through the very center of a "bunch," and the girl, with a woman's inborn dread of cows, grew alarmed at the proximity of the surrounding longhorns, but the guide assured her that there was not the least danger "unless she projicked with the mavericks." This, being interpreted, was a warning against molesting the young calves, a sport which was not to Miss Renwyck's taste for various reasons, and she soon lost all fear of the sad eyed brutes before her.

Toward sunset they came in sight of Bill Williams' ranch, and, having skirted a wire fence for several miles, they entered at last and dismounted before the mud thatched palace of the Texan cattle king, where the jovial despot himself came out to welcome them.

The two financiers, each approaching Dr. Osler's line of uselessness, formed a complete antithesis. The New Yorker was a typical financial potentate, educated, cultivated, cold, deliberate in speech, calm in demeanor, composed in method, faultless in every detail of his dress. His features were prominent and severe, the ruddy hue of his face relieved by a gray mustache and side whiskers. In every step and movement he showed the unmistakable hallmarks of birth, breeding and prosperity. Yet there was not a bolder, more daring operator on the exchange than Renwyck. Old Bill Williams was a man of giant stature, indifferent as to dress, careless as to language. His education had been gained in the saddle and smacked of the leather. He read few books, but he knew cattle and men, and there was not a better judge of land values and the merits or demerits of a scheme in the west. His shrewd and kindly face was clean shaven, round and joyful, lit by a pair of steel gray eyes that twinkled continually in harmony with the genial smile which sometimes caused the careless to lose sight of the firmness of the clean cut lips and the square, resolute jaw—a man who was known and honored in seven states and loved by every ranchman within a radius of a thousand miles. Renwyck was ice, Williams fire, so that au fond there was not a great deal of difference between their methods, for heat and cold both burn.

Mr. Williams, who, like all Texans, was the soul of hospitality, offered his guests the best his ranch afforded, and neither Miss Renwyck nor her father found cause to murmur. When supper was over and Miss Harriet, who was sleepy from her long ride, was shown

The two cantered along in the pleasant morning. The enjoyment of the ride greatly mollified Mr. Renwyck's exacerbated temper, although it in no wise altered his determination to make Williams suffer on account of the rupture. As for Miss Harriet, she thoroughly enjoyed it and only regretted that the experience would soon terminate in the luxurious monotony of her father's private car. From time to time her father left her and rode to the top of one of the hills to the right to survey the country and to make sure, in so far as he could, that they were going in the right direction.

About midday they overtook a great herd of cattle drifting along the prairie as they fed. Mr. Renwyck was on the hill at the time. So far as the girl could see, the rolling prairie was dotted with hundreds of steers. There were perhaps 2,000 in the bunch. They were grazing peaceably enough on the short grass. Here and there a steer had lain down for a midday rest and was quietly chewing the cud of the morning meal. Remembering the assurance of the day before, she fearlessly cantered along, threading her way through the animals, supposing her father would join her in a few moments. She was thinking carelessly of the great difference between her situation then and her ordinary environment, which might be typified by upper Fifth avenue, New York.

Her reveries were broken by a sudden commotion. One of those mysterious impulses which are felt without being seen or heard suddenly awoke the great mass of steers to action. One lazy old fellow, lying down for a noon-day siesta perhaps half a mile ahead, unfortunately had his tail stepped on by a fellow brute heedless of where he was going. The force of the blow tore off the tuft on the end of the tail. The blood spurted from the wounded member. The maimed steer scrambled to his feet, bellowing. In his anguish he began lashing his sides with his tail. The steer that had caused the trouble, infuriated at the sight and smell of blood, immediately dashed at his wounded companion. The victim, instinctively realizing that he was becoming persona non grata to the whole herd, turned and fled for his life.

With the swiftness of a military maneuver the nearest cattle fell in line and joined the chase. Before Miss Renwyck realized what had happened the herd of cattle, "barking" madly, as the short, sharp bellow on such occasions is called, was racing directly at her forty abreast. In the twinkling of an eye every one of the brutes was in frantic motion. She was petrified with astonishment, although blissfully ignorant of the extent of her danger. She heard a shrill, frightened cry from her father and looked back. Other steers—for she had reached the middle of the herd—were racing past her in such a way as to sweep around and join the pursuers. Her pony, an ill trained broncho not used to the range, more frightened than she, began to cut up viciously. Blind with terror and utterly uncontrollable, at last he bolted directly toward the oncoming animals.

Then she knew her peril. Instinctively she screamed and waved her free hand. The leading rank of the stampeding herd was diverted from the direct course by her approach and her cries and turned aside. They swept around in a great circle, the other steers blindly following. Before the girl realized what had occurred she

the dew claws and the cleft hoofs as the feet are lifted sharply from the ground. These, with the rattling of horns and the bellowing of those on the outer edge, make the animal whirlpool a perfect inferno of noise and clamor.

The mill sweeps around and around, and the only way to break it is to unwind it—that is, to cut into the bunch and start the outer edge off on a tangent, so that the whole unwinds itself mechanically by reversing the process which brought it together. This is an operation of much difficulty, attended with great danger. The man who breaks in must do it backward, as it were. He must follow the movement of the perimeter of the great circle, heading as the cattle do, and by skill and dexterity force out first one and then another until he gets the circumference broken. In the end the break is apt to come quickly, and the awful maelstrom of maddened animals dissolves into a peaceable herd almost as quickly as it wound itself into a frantic mob.

To be caught inside such a mill is death. Fortunately Harriet Renwyck was on the outskirts. The situation was sufficiently terrifying as it was, however. Above the dust she could see a tossing, quivering expanse of barked heads. She was riding a man's saddle and in man fashion. The pressure upon her horse was so tremendous that in order to keep from being crushed she shook her feet from the stirrups and drew her legs up about the saddlehorn. She had no control whatever of her pony. Although she was fortunately on the outer edge of the ring, there were still a half dozen of the cattle between her and the open prairie, all crowding into the center, and with every turn she was being carried toward the vortex with irresistible force.

She was utterly terrified, yet she realized that her only possible hope of salvation was to keep her senses and her seat. If she fainted and fell the result would be death. The love of life was strong in her, and she clung to her saddle and prayed as never before. Her eyes were blinded with dust and fear. She could see nothing but cattle and the terrible gyrating mass. How long she whirled about with them in giddy rotation she could not tell. It seemed hours, ages, before a voice pierced her ear. Where did it come from? She turned her eyes toward the sound and dimly made out the figure of a man on the edge of the circle above the cloud of dust. He seemed to her of gigantic stature. What was he saying? She strained every nerve to understand. Presently she made out: "Keep up! Don't let go! We'll get you out!"

This was reassurance, but not much. The prospect seemed hopeless. The cattle were going slower now as she worked toward the center, which was yet a great way off. Her pony was wedged in so tightly that he could not fall. The voice kept up a continual cry of encouragement. It seemed to be drawing nearer, but the terrible strain under which she was laboring was telling upon her. Although she clutched the pommel of her saddle with the tenacity of despair, she found herself swaying dizzily. She clinched her teeth and summoned all her resolution for a last effort, but realized with a growing horror that her end was near. If help did not come quickly she would be prostrate on the mass of horns. Still the voice appealed to her, called

With the other's assistance he lowered the girl to the grass and dismounted himself. Miss Harriet Renwyck was not exactly at her best at that moment. She was as white as a cotton boll where her pallor could be seen for the dust. Her glorious black hair was unbound and flowed in wild disorder about her. Her clothing was ripped and torn. She was the picture of death. Yet in the eyes of the cowboy who had saved her she was beautiful. He took his water bottle and sprinkled her face with its contents with little effect. Deftly then the man whipped out his knife, cut the tight stock she wore and ripped open her dress at the neck. Then he splashed more water in her face, and at last under its stimulus she opened her eyes and stared at a figure bending over her. She saw a stalwart blond young man who would have been handsome but for a ten days' growth of beard that covered his face, dusty and sweat streaked from his recent efforts.

"You're all right, miss," said the cowboy soothingly as she gazed at him with dawning comprehension. "Drink this," he added as he compelled her to take a pull at his flask, which fortunately happened to be not quite empty, although the day was no longer young. She obeyed him.

"Those terrible cattle!" she faltered as the fiery liquid renewed her strength.

"They're all gone. You're perfectly safe, miss."

"And you—drew me out!"

"It's nothing at all. Anybody would have done it."

"You saved my life. I shall never forget it. I should have fallen long before had your voice not kept me up."

She sat up, covered her face with her hands and shuddered violently.

"I shall never get that sight out of my mind!"

"It was only a little mill, miss," said the cowboy. "We broke it easily."

"Where is my father?" asked the girl hastily. "Where is my horse?"

"As for your father, I didn't see him. I guess your pony has gone with the herd. But you're welcome to mine. Hello, here are your friends, I reckon!" he exclaimed as he saw two or three horsemen galloping over the rise beyond.

Back of them came the spring wagon, drawn by mules on the dead run. Old Jacob Renwyck knew enough about cattle to realize his daughter's danger. He had also realized that he could do absolutely nothing to help her. But, as luck would have it, his outfit was near at hand. It was that he had signaled her from the top of the hill. He and his daughter had made a detour, and the wagon, traveling on the chord of the arc, was almost up with him when the stampede came. He raced down the hill toward it, shouting the terrible tidings. Cowboys and gaudies in his outfit galloped up to do exactly what had been done. In a moment they had gathered around the two.

"Oh, father!" said the girl as Renwyck swung himself from his saddle and dropped on his knees beside her. "Are you safe, my dear?"

"Perfectly safe, thanks to this gen-

his father's interests in New York. He explained the details of his operations carefully to the boy, provided him with the necessary credentials and told him to hustle east and get in communication with a firm of brokers with whom his father already had dealt, who were to advise with Richard with regard to whatever action was required.

Of course the young man learned the details of the quarrel between the two partners, and a few questions put him in possession of the name and address of the girl who had made so deep an impression upon him. With unusual discretion, he said nothing whatever to his father about the adventure. Such things do happen outside of books, and Richard was thoroughly in love with the girl whom for one brief moment he had held in his arms. He was more than willing, therefore, to carry out his father's wishes. In the pursuit of the old man's business he was determined that he would find time in some way, in spite of the rupture, to further his own affairs. The mere fact that enmity had given a place to friendship and that there was open warfare between the two houses added zest to his love affair. He had cut her out from a herd of steers, and he had faith that he could win her from the Wall street "bunch," as he phrased it, or from any other group of men who, if they had his appreciation of a good thing, would surely be stam- peding in her direction whenever she appeared.

In due season, therefore, Richard Williams arrived in New York, where he settled himself comfortably at the St. Regis. Preliminary to entrance on his financial campaign, and especially in the hope of making himself outwardly more fit for his role of a passionate pilgrim, he discarded his San Antonio clothing, including his soft felt hat of sombrero-like dimensions, for an outfit so completely up to date that his best friends on the range would not have recognized him and then plunged into the business which had brought him north. He presented himself at the offices of Messrs. Benton & Cartwell, in Wall street, where the preparatory details looking toward the final adjustment of his father's complicated interests with Mr. Renwyck were put in train for settlement with amazing celerity. Where in Texas deals were consummated over a pipe and several long drinks—sometimes behind the barrel of a gun, too—in New York the cores of the same deals were bored into by snappy little gentlemen with the feverish energy of a belated commuter in the elusive hope of catching the next train.

"Mr. Benton," said Richard as he shook hands with the senior partner, "seems to me we've branded this maverick in record time."

Mr. Benton gave him a hurried smile and a hurried hand. "The—er—calf will grow into beef, I trust. Honored to have met you, sir. Good morning."

The young man entered the elevator, was dropped down twenty-one stories, more or less, and found himself again in the busy, roaring streets. With the exception of the sale of one large batch of railroad bonds, which could not be negotiated for at least a month on account of some restriction clauses, his father's business would require no further attention from him for the next two weeks. His time was now his own, and every energy was bent upon one subject—picking up the trail, so to speak, of Miss Harriet Renwyck. It was an easy task, for the "sign" was good and plenty, as a cowboy would have phrased it. He easily located the offices of old Jacob Renwyck on Broad street and learned without difficulty that the family were at present occupying their country place near Irvington-on-the-Hudson. But this knowledge, after all, was of little value. He could not present himself as the son of William Williams for obvious reasons. He smiled as he pictured his father's apoplectic rage at such a proceeding and ceased to smile at the fancy of his visiting card in the hands of the tartar, Jacob Renwyck.

He made a flying trip to Irvington and walked around the extensive grounds several times in the hope of catching a glimpse of his divinity, but failed, even from the vantage point of the surrounding wall, to discover a single inmate, with the exception of a groom exercising a horse and riding with a curious up and down English motion that nearly turned the Texan's stomach. He returned to New York despondent, but with a mental picture of the home in which she dwelt, which was like a crumb of consolation. He grew the more restless and unhappy on that account. He did not want crumbs; he craved the whole loaf.

He visited the theaters and the opera, but his thoughts were not with the painted puppets of bygone days. Throughout the mimic tragedies—he was in no mood for comedy—he saw a more stirring scene: A piebald broncho, quivering between his knees as it tore through a bunch of plunging steers, a weight in his arms and a limp head hanging backward, a cheek that had brushed his own. With her a ten-cent show would be a heavenly entertainment; without her "Gottterdammerung" was just a noise. Others not in love have thought the same.

He spent his time in wandering aimlessly about, making and rejecting one idiotic plan after another. He was entirely unknown in the city, lonely, miserable and as far from meeting the object of his affection as though he were back again in the Lone Star State.

On the morning of the fifth day of his suspense while crossing upper Fifth avenue he was nearly run down by a coffee colored touring car which recklessly swung around a corner, skidding as it took the turn. He leaped for his life to the sidewalk, turned and was about to express a candid opinion of the driver when his sulphurous salutation was exchanged for one of surprise and pleasure. The offending automobile had come to a stop, and in its solitary occupant Richard recognized a friend of former days, one George Henry Fitz-Clarence de Courcy Howard, earl of Croylaud.

This gentleman had spent several months with Richard on the ranch in Texas, and, while the two men had few tastes in common, still a friendship knit upon the boundless plains is usually more lasting than one contracted in the whirl and rush of city life. "Are you safe, my dear?"

"Perfectly safe, thanks to this gentleman."

"Sir," began her father impressively, "I owe"—

"Oh, it's nothing," said the cowboy lightly, "nothing at all. It was just breaking a mill. Any of these boys will tell you how easily it can be done. Now, if you'll excuse me, I've got to go after my bunch. Goodby, miss; you'll be all right in no time."

He swung himself into his saddle.

"But, my dear sir," cried Mr. Renwyck, "your name?"

The cowboy was already on the gallop. He turned and shouted something that no one could understand and then was gone. The girl stared after him in great disappointment. He had saved her life, rescued her like a hero—but to leave her that way, and for a lot of wretched cattle—it was too provoking!

"Do any of you know that man?" asked Mr. Renwyck.

"Ain't never seed him afore," replied the guide.

"From wot he says, though, he sure knows his biz," said another. "The chances of gittin' out'n that mill"—he looked at the ground torn by the trampling herd—"was sure less'n nothin', all right."

"Father," said the girl weakly, the reaction setting in, "let's go home. I've had enough of this terrible country—these awful cows."

"It breeds men, though, miss," said the guide, "as well as cattle."

"Yes," said the girl, "it certainly bred one. I wish I knew his name."

"I'll try to find it fer ye, miss," said the guide, "although 'tain't jest the thing to ax a gent's name out here. The boys gener'ly don't use their own names on a range. They've frequently got reasons for not mentionin' of 'em. But, wotever his name is, he's a man, all right."

"He is, indeed," said Miss Renwyck, and then she promptly collapsed a second time.

CHAPTER III.

RICHARD WILLIAMS, a young man of twenty-four, a graduate of the University of Texas, had spent the two years since he had won his sheepskin on a range of his own, which had come to him through his mother. Foolish differences had arisen between him and his father, in which the young man was generally in the wrong. A reconciliation had been effected, however, a short time before the arrival of Mr. Renwyck, and Richard had combined his cattle with some of his father's. It was this joint herd which had nearly ended the life of Miss Renwyck.

The day after the departure of Jacob Renwyck and the young lady Richard Williams had saved in so daring and romantic a manner the young man was summoned to the ranch by a message from his father. Recognizing that it was war to the knife between him and his former partner, the Texan laid his plans to bring to his feet the schemers of New York. It was the west against the east, and no mercy was to be shown on either side.

Richard's experience had been on the practical side of the business. He was his father's son, however, and Bill Williams had every confidence that he could be safely intrusted to look after usually more lasting than one contracted in the whirl and rush of city life. In general appearance the two were not unlike, both blonds, rather tall and marked with the branding iron of vigorous manhood, although Richard was the younger, the fresher and the more virile. The earl had been in America for perhaps a year, seeking by various schemes to rehabilitate an impoverished estate and in all his undertakings meeting with indifferent success. He had become the sole owner of a "salted" mine in Colorado; he had recouped in Birmingham real estate, only to "drop his pile" again in Texas cattle. At present his bow was strung with two widely differing cords—one a secret mission, with a lucrative promise, for an oriental government regarding the surreptitious purchase of submarines and other war material in violation of the neutrality laws; the other a somewhat hackneyed scheme of exchanging an earl's coronet for a seven-figured bank account, the figure of the necessarily accompanying lady being a matter of little moment.

OLD PLUMES TRANSFORMED.

Fashions For Spring Are the Wildest
and Freakiest Since the Invention of the Needle and the Discovery of Silk—Some of Their Vagaries.

Dear Elsa—I know how perfectly horrid it is to speak disparagingly to outsiders of one's relatives, but the truth is ever since the holidays we have been fairly inundated with a steady stream of relatives staying in the house with us until these visitations have worn my poor nerves almost to the proverbial frazzle. Some of the guests I liked extremely for the first week or so after their arrival, but before their departure I almost went the length of loathing these same good people. All my fault! Possibly, but that only makes the situation a degree worse if anything.

Do you know, dear, I think if there were only seven jokes in the world certainly the witticism concerning the uncongeniality of relatives would hold a conspicuous place among them, for ever since time immemorial undisciplined men and women who have lived under the same roof—and most of us are undisciplined—have wrangled and to headgear and a Balkan, Serbian or Russian woman in the rest of your costume, for we are modistically caught up in the eastern war cloud, and all sorts of far eastern oddities are to be our fate next spring. Hats are like Chinese lateen sails, trimmings like scimitars and skirt draperies like Chinese laundry tickets.

Well, maybe I am exaggerating a bit, but we are going to be most all these things in our new togs. Speaking of hats, a friend of mine recently returned from abroad said to me, "See my new hat with seven ostrich feathers!" I looked and beheld a very tiny chapeau of satin with the new point at the back brim and at one side of the hat a small, rather depressed looking ornament, which appeared to be a limp quill made of silk threads.

"There are seven long, handsome ostrich feathers in that wisp of a thing, my dear," asserted the late arrival from Paris.

"I know it is incredible, but that despondent looking quill is one of the most chic and expensive hat trimmings in Paris at this minute. It is called scraped ostrich, and the stems of seven plumes were scraped clean of feathery plumage and mounted again on a central stem to make the quill."

This ornament is not a bit funnier than the new spring flowers that are to adorn hats, which are made of tiny feathers dyed in realistic colorings and formed into roses, pansies and all kinds of millinery flora.

But, to come back to feathers, I know how disappointed you were after saving up your pennies for months to invest in a stunning willow plume, and right after your purchase Dame Fashion had the unkindness to call them off the list of things modish.

Affliction has always a grace if one can find the way. Enter with me into the charmed portal and let the fashion alchemist transform your de mod, willow plume into a wreath of approved beauty, the curled French feather, which leads the sartorial van just now.

This is the way it's done: The ends are clipped from the willow plume just above the knot, and the shortened plumes are curled up evenly. This makes a rather narrow but fluffy wreath of feathers, and these narrow wreaths are laid flat within the curl of the wide hat brim, but not poised against the crown.

One or two small and not too expensive French tips curling over the brim at one side near the back complete a perfect up to date hat, and the number of these ostrich wreaths seen on the new millinery demonstrates that something has been done with the hopelessly passe willows, after all.

Having scattered these crumbs of comfort in your direction, I will repair myself to the kitchen, where I will scatter a few more over the top of a brown betty pudding, which is in the process of making for tonight's dinner. Devotedly, uncongeniality of relatives would find a conspicuous place among them, for ever since time immemorial undisciplined men and women who have lived under the same roof—and most of us are undisciplined—have wrangled and bickered and quarreled to a greater or less extent. I heard recently of a canny old Scotchman who seems to have pretty clear ideas of the relation problem. He invited his married daughter and her husband to spend the first year of their married life with him. But after six months he built a small house for her across the street. "It is best to let the wind blow between relatives," he wisely remarked.

My idea is that when the strain becomes too great it is best to make a change before something decidedly unpleasant happens. One's sentiment suffers, to be sure, but that is much better than having one's disposition ruined and one's nerves worn to a frazzle. The solution of many a family unhappiness and many a quarrelling household could be found in trying a different arrangement of melange, for the old Scotchman was right, and probably the wind that blew between his house and his daughter's home was a soft and gentle one.

"Now," as the walrus said, "is the time to talk of other things" and to be further bromidic in my quotations. In the spring a woman's fancy turns to thoughts of her new clothes and particularly her new hats, for these are the first harbingers of warm weather.

Well, dear, you must prepare yourself to look like an Indian princess as trilateral are dark with mulberry trees. The mulberry tree is the hardest worked piece of timber in the world. First its leaves are skinned off for the worms to feed on, then the little branches are clipped for the worms to nest in, then the large limbs are cropped for charcoal, and the trunk has not only to produce a new crop of leaves and limbs for next year, but must act as trellis for a grapevine.

A Curiosity About Eclipses.

The average number of total and partial eclipses in any one year is four, the maximum seven and the minimum two. There is nothing really peculiar in this except the fact that where only two occur they are always both of the sun. There are more solar than lunar eclipses, but the sun, being so much larger than the earth or moon, the shadow terminates at a point and is visible only along a narrow track, while the lunar obscuration is frequently visible over half a continent.

FOR THE DINNER TABLE.

Charming and Simple Designs For 1913 Centerpieces.

Since the centerpiece never entirely goes out new designs always appeal to the woman who embroiders. A novel one that can be developed entirely in white or in natural colors and in various stitches has a wreath design of heads of wheat in full bloom, interlaced with a graceful ribbon effect.

The edge of this centerpiece is especially new, as the scallop is drawn in overlapping lines that give the effect of a box plaited edge, with every other group resembling an inverted box plait. An easy treatment for this pattern is to outline and darn the ribbon work, make the wheat heads solid embroidery and do the foliage in combination satin stitch and seeding. The edge is buttonholed.

Another more elegant is a design with a simple grouped scallop kept quite shallow and buttonholed in white mercerized cotton and a circle formed of three conventionalized flowerpots holding trees, alternating with conventionalized baskets of flowers, the groups connected by two detached straight lines with three embroidered dots between. This is somewhat on Biedermaier lines, but is developed stylishly in white.

A handsome centerpiece for color work has azaleas and foliage worked into wreath effect and shaded like the natural flowers. The edges are slightly padded with chain stitch, all turn-overs more heavily padded, and the surface is covered in Kensington stitch. The leaves may be outlined and half of one side seeded if solid embroidery seems too much work. The shading can be done from colored designs if the natural blossoms cannot be obtained.

Wholesome Peanut Brittle.

Shell and remove the brown skins from a quart of roasted peanuts. Roll the nuts until they are thoroughly broken; sift, saving the finer parts to use for rolling as you use flour with the cookies. Put a pound of sugar into a clean saucepan. Stand it over a brisk fire, stir and shake until the sugar is thoroughly melted. You must not add water or any other material. When it has melted and looks like golden sirup take it from the fire and stir in quickly as many rolled peanuts as the sugar will hold. Cover the board with the fine peanuts, turn out the hot mixture, sprinkle over more peanuts and roll into a very thin sheet. This must be done quickly or the mixture will harden. With a long knife mark the brittle into squares, wait a moment until it cools, then loosen it from the board, break it into squares and put it away. The rough, unsightly pieces may be put aside to use at once.

Had Poor Taste.

"Yes, but he doesn't know he's a valuable dog. Look at him, will you, scratching yonder in that cheap dirt when he might as well be up the boulevard scratching in ground worth $500 a front foot?"—Washington Herald.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skillful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $31 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment."

RHEUMATISM KEPT HIM IN BED

Suffered Tortures Until "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

MCMILLAN'S CORNER, ONT.

SEPT. 30th. 1910

"Your remedy, "Fruit-a-ives" is a perfect panacea for Rheumatism. For years, I suffered distressing pain from Sciatica or Sciatic Rheumatism, being laid up several times a year for days at a time. I went to different doctors who told me there was no use doing anything—it would pass away. They gave me mustard plasters and other remedies that did no good. Plasters took no effect on me—except to blister me and make raw spots. I took many advertised remedies without benefit, but fortunately, about two years ago, I got "Fruit-a-ives" and they cured me.

Since then, I take "Fruit-a-tives" occasionally and keep free of pain. I am satisfied "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism and they will cure anyone who takes them as directed. If this letter would be of value to you, publish it" JOHN B. McDONALD.

Indeed, this letter is of value to us and to the thousands of sufferers from Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago and Neuralgia. It points the way to a certain cure. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50 trial size, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-atives Limited, Ottawa.

Stores Up Sleep.

It would be a great convenience if one could store up sleep as a camel stores up water, and a correspondent assures us that he knows one man who has acquired, to some extent, this useful habit. He goes to bed on Saturday night and more than sleeps the clock round, seldom rising before 7 o'clock Sunday evening. Throughout Sunday night he can work, and for the rest of the week three hours in bed each night suffices him, and he is always fit.—London Globe.

"Caww," grinned No. 23.

The collection contains some of the most precious manuscripts in existence, including the Biblical "Codex Vaticanus" of the fourth century, the fifth century "Vergil" and the palimpsest "De Officiis" of Cicero. The printed edition of 2,500 fifteenth century editions, many of them vellum. The total library has been estimated to comprise over 220,000 volumes, 30,000 manuscripts, but it has not been adequately catalogued. (The New York Times, 1/1/54, p. 1)

ried the girl I had been en

Dairymen practically all agree that a greater total amount of milk is secured when the cows freshen in the fall, says a correspondent of Iowa Homestead. The real advantage comes from the stimulus of fresh grass in the spring. In the case of spring calving the same stage in lactation is reached at the time pastures dry up. Then as the natural tendency is for the milk flow to fall off, the change to dry feed is made, which brings a further reduction. Instead of that, cows that have freshened in the fall are turned on spring pasture, and the flow kept up for some time. Twenty per cent as the increase in yearly production is probably none too high an estimation for the additional amount secured by that practice.

Winter dairying has other desirable features. On the small farm or on the general farm where only a few cows are kept, it serves as a means of giving employment at least a part of the time for the owner and hired help. It relieves the work of milking and caring for cows and calves in summer when field work is most urgent. Thus it is a material aid in solving the hired man problem, for it helps to distribute

The Holsteins cow Johanna Korn-dyke Susie De Kol has a record of 7,950.50 pounds of milk and 233 pounds of fat in 133 days. She is owned by the Minnesota Insane Asylum. Under the management of A. E. Keen the asylum herd of thirty-seven cows, which was not producing sufficient milk to pay for food consumed, has been culled and reorganized. Of the original herd but nine cows remain. The present herd of nineteen cows, consisting of pure bred and grade Holsteins, produces more than twice as much milk as was produced by the original herd of thirty-seven cows.

the labor throughout the year and to give employment continuously. Also it makes farm work more congenial. Where only a few cows are kept the milking is usually an extra job to be done after the regular day's work in the field. Winter dairying changes that, making a minimum amount of milking necessary in the summer.

Milk can be more easily cared for in

Usually a better price is received for dairy products in winter. The total production is always less. The demand is as great, if not greater; consequently the law of supply and demand decrees a higher price in winter.

Winter dairying is not without its responsibilities. The feeding problem is more serious. In the case of cows that have advanced far in the lactation period it does not make so much difference if they do dry off as the winter months pass. In fact, that is what is expected of them. However, with cows that have just begun the year's lactation period the case is different. If the greatest profit is to be secured they must be fed in such manner as to induce them to keep a heavy flow.

Comfortable quarters are essential for successful winter dairying. One of the mistakes made at this point probably more mistakes have been made than in regard to any other. A dairy cow is using her blood and already digested food for the secretion of milk. In case she is not provided with ample protection against rain or cold she must slacken up on milk secretion and with that same material warm her body. It is plain that she must have a warm place. It need not be expensive. Equally true is the fact that drinking water should be warmed. Cold, icy water, if she is compelled to drink it, must be warmed in her body and by heat from the food she has eaten, and that is a rather expensive fuel.

Grain and Quality of Butter.

The character of the food frequently influences the quality of the butter. The white, hard, tasteless character of winter butter results from the food given. Fresh pasture, bright legume hays, corn silage and soiling crops give color to the milk and to butter. Gluten or corn produces a soft butter. Wheat bran makes a harder butter than either. If much of gluten is introduced into a ration the butter will be soft, but its hardness may be improved by the use of cottonseed meal, a feed that makes a very hard butter. By mixing the two a better grade of butter will be obtained than if either is used alone. A pound or two of cottonseed meal when the cows are on pasture helps to counteract the objectionable softness of butter during the pasture season.

Hint For Horsemen.

Never start to lead the horse from his stall till you hold or fasten back the door. Doors have been known to swing to where they were not fastened open, catching the horse's head, the animal pulling back and breaking his neck.

Pauline Johnson, "Poetess of Canadian Outdoors," died Saturday morning in Bute street private hospital. Vancouver, B. C., where she has spent over a year of hopeless illness. For four years this gifted Canadian has been a resident of Vancouver, trying to escape the dread tuberculosis disease, to which her Indian origin made her heir. Miss Johnson's poems, mainly on outdoor subjects, brought her distinction in England and in the United States, as well as appreciation in Canada. She was born in 1862, on a reserve near Brantford. Her father was Chief William Henry Johnson, of the Six Nation Indians. Her mother was a white woman. Deceased was well known in Napanee.

Bingay; "An Eastern Black Fox Ranch" another series "Small Fur Bearers and How to Take Them" by George J. Thiessen; an installment of "A Canoe Trip in 1854, and other articles of outdoor life both East and West. The issue is attractively illustrated and should be read by all sportsmen and lovers of outdoor life.

Interesting side-lights on the public feeling of Upper Canada a hundred years ago are found in the eighth report of the Ontario Bureau of Archives. The whole volume is occupied by the journals of the House of Assembly beginning on April 10th, 1805, and continuing until March 13th, 1811. A good deal of the material is purely formal—such as speeches from the throne and addresses in reply, and of course no hint of the discussions is given. But the petitions from various parts of the country are illuminating. Take for example one dated January 15th, 1810, from freeholders from the united counties from Lennox and Addington and the county of Prince Edward, except Ameliasburgh. John Ferguson, Reuben Bedell, Ebenezer Washburn, Simeon Washburn and thirteen others prayed that the seats of John Roblin and James Wilson should be vacated because these persons when elected "then were, and for many years before, and still are public preachers and teachers in the society or community of people called Methodist." Therefore, "your petitioners humbly represent that the said John Roblin and James Wilson are not eligible to seats, or to be returned as members of the House of Assembly of the province."

Our Reeve Turned Down.

At the County Council on Monday afternoon Reeve Osborne asked the County Council for the use of the county stone crusher to crush stone for the town. Reeve Osborne was listened to but his request received scant courtesy at the hands of the council. The matter was referred to the Roads and Bridges committee who intimated their intention of refusing the request. On Wednesday morning Mr. John Lowry, street commissioner, attended the County Council and after addressing the council for a few minutes the County Council unanimously granted the request of the town for the use of the crusher. The usefulness of our Reeve as a representative at the County Council Board seems to be on the wane.
